CITY.

And Still Another Wreck Elsewhere we publish a dispatch from Corvallis to the effect that the mail carrier who arrived there on last Saturday from Newport brings intelligence of another marine disaster. The wreck of a schooner was seen about twelve miles from Cape Foulweather. The hull was ashore at that point, bottom up and was loaded with cedar lumber. Only one body was washed ashore, and nothing has been heard from any of the crew so that all are supposed to have perished. The name of the wrecked vessel is unknown. There seems to be some reason for the belief that the lost vessel is the Modesta, which sailed from San Francisco on the 4th inst. In the Corvallis Gazette of the 10th inst. we observe the following: Last Wednesday afternoon we were agreeably surprised and delighted by Capt. Winant darting into our sanctum. A sight of his genial countenance, notwithstanding he bore considerable roughness, is enough to dispel the worst of blues. Just a fortnight previous to this day the captain flitted through our city en route to San Francisco. In that time he had visited the metropolis of the Golden State, made a full report, in person, to the owners of the schooner Lizzie which he was in charge of, to the satisfaction of the owners, and returned to this city. And as a guarantee of the confidence and trust reposed in Capt. Winant, he was furnished another vessel, the schooner Modesta, which sailed last Saturday for Yaquina Bay, while Capt. Winant took up passage in advance by steamer. This accomplished, he will have quick dispatch for San Francisco with oysters and lumber from Yaquina Mills." A sufficient time has elapsed since the Modesta left Yaquina Bay to enable her destination to be reached, and probably to complete her cargo. The fact that she has not reached her destination and is not likely to take away to San Francisco cargo of lumber is supposition that she is the vessel referred to. Full particulars will be given in a few days.

PS.—Since the above was in type we have received information which disproves the statement that the lost vessel is the Modesta. That vessel has not reached her destination last night, nor yet. From all that can be ascertained the wrecked craft came from Shoalwater bay.

A Pleasure and Back.—The Colonist of the 9th inst. contains the following account of the trip on record accomplished by the steamer Queen Telfair from Victoria to Wrangel and back again. The steamer Wrangel arrived here at 3 P. M. yesterday from Sitka, bringing down Pilot Robert Hicks, of the ex-pilot Queen Telfair who informs us that the latter vessel returned from Fort Wrangel to Nanaimo at 1 o'clock yesterday morning. The Telfair made a splendid trip, arriving at Fort Wrangel in three days and nine hours from this port. It will be remembered she left here on the 28th ult. with a large number of miners on board for Cassiar, she called in at Nanaimo on her way up to take Pilot Hicks on board and reached Fort Wrangel on Thursday the 2d inst. She lay there discharging freight 24 hours, and then steamed away again on the 3d inst. at 9 P. M., passing Fort Rupert on the down trip at 4 A. M. on Sunday morning and reaching Nanaimo at 1 o'clock yesterday morning—thus making the round trip, including detentions, in seven days and thirteen hours. The steamer Otter, which sailed from this port on the same day as the Queen Telfair, is reported to have passed Bella Bella, bound north, on the 1st inst., at 9 P. M. but she had not arrived at Wrangel when the Telfair left that port nor had the Telfair seen anything of her. There is no news from the mines. There were about 200 men at Fort Wrangel. It had already started up the Stikine on the ice. The weather was intensely cold at last accounts, and 24 feet of snow were on the ground. The Queen Telfair experienced very heavy winds and passed through blinding snow storms. Her time both going up and for the round trip is the best on record." The Queen Telfair reached here yesterday morning with a cargo of coal.

Literary and Musical Entertainment.—Lovers of music, poetry and song will be reminded by this that a rare entertainment is promised this (Monday) evening at Masonic Hall by Mr J. O. Fergueson, under the auspices of St. Andrew's Society. Mr Fergusson's subject will be "Scotland, her Poetry, her Humor, her Music and her Song. The entertainment is to consist of a lecture on these subjects, interspersed with readings, anecdotes and songs, as illustrations of Scottish humor and music. During the evening Mr Fergueson will render a number of Scottish airs on the bagpipe on which instrument he is a most artistic performer, having been awarded an elegant gold medal by the Caledonian Club of San Francisco for his skillful playing. The lecturer comes with the highest encomiums from the press and public. A late number of the Sacramento Record Union speaks as follows of his lecture: "The lecturer has an excellent appearance, a fine voice and an agreeable manner of addressing an audience. His subject was Scotland—her poetry, humor music and song, and the various parts were so nicely presented that the audience was highly entertained. Blended with the humor, poetry and song was much good, solid instruction and taken as a whole, the lecture was one of the most satisfactory of those which have formed the course which the Institute have presented to the public during the season which ended last evening. The lecturer proved himself a musical artist as well and sang, in Scottish keys, and rendered several national songs, etc., upon the bagpipes in such an excellent manner that the hearers became enthusiastic."

The Schooner Lizzie.—It is learned that the little schooner Lizzie, Captain Winant, under which particulars of the loss of which at Yaquina Bay were published several weeks since in the Oregonian, was insured for $1,000. There was no insurance, however, on the cargo, which was worth about $5,000 and subject to the general average, in such cases after deducting proceeds of sale of wreck. Her crew reached Portland from the coast, has not been heard from.
